

Approved For Release 2005/09/29 : CIA-RDP80B01495R000600040016-8

DDI-696-74

Office of the Director of Central Intelligence

7 March 1974

Mr. Milton Kovner, INR
EUR/SOV
Room 4217

Dear Milt,

Since your visit out here last month, we have been discussing a variety of ways to address the concerns that you expressed about technological transfer. We have finally settled on the notion of a paper which tackles the various problems seriation, without trying to link them closely in an integrated analysis similar to OER's two recent papers.

I attach the series of questions which we plan to deal with. As you will see, they are heavily judgmental, are not designed to present new facts, and will in some cases, result in little essays on the limits of human foresight. Earlier lists were up to three times as long, but we think the scope suggested by this version is about right. We hope you will look them over and let us know whether some are unnecessary to your purposes or whether additional questions, pitched at about the same level, would be useful.

We plan to complete this project in April.

National Intelligence Officer for USSR/EE

cc: Mr. Proctor
Mr. Ernst
Mr.
Mr. Parmenter
Mr.

25X1

25X1